PRINTER,
48 & 50 Duane St., N. Y.

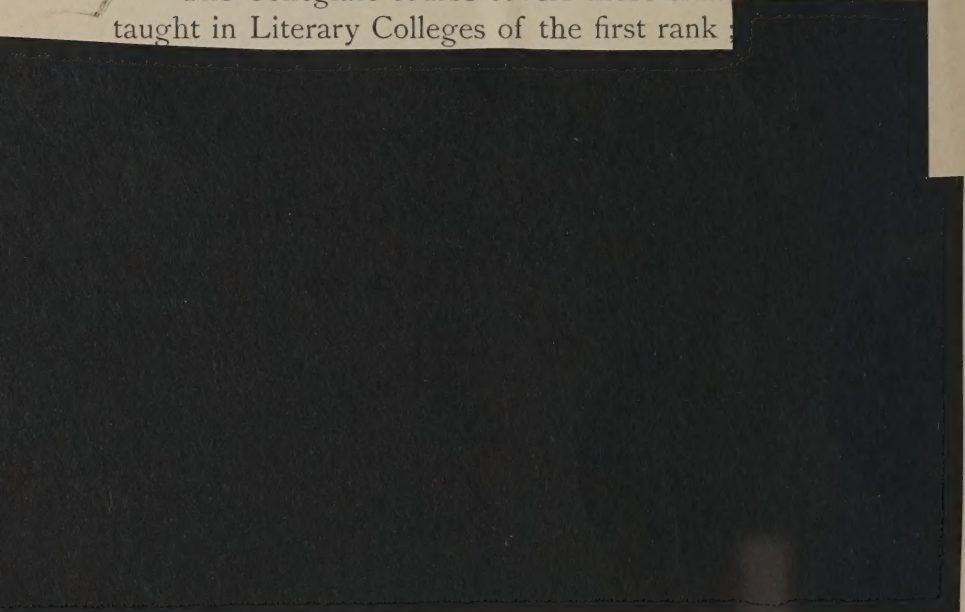

J. M. J. V.

its aim is to give a sound mental and moral training to its students ; and accordingly, the course of studies is comprehensive and judiciously arranged.

Believing that the "cramming system" is both false in principle and very injurious to the young mind, the faculty of the College seek rather to direct the pupil in his studies, to make him think and investigate for himself, than to burden his memory with a load of indigested matter, at the expense of intellectual developement. This system produces thoughtful self-relying young men—an object that in an educational institution should be sacrificed to no other.

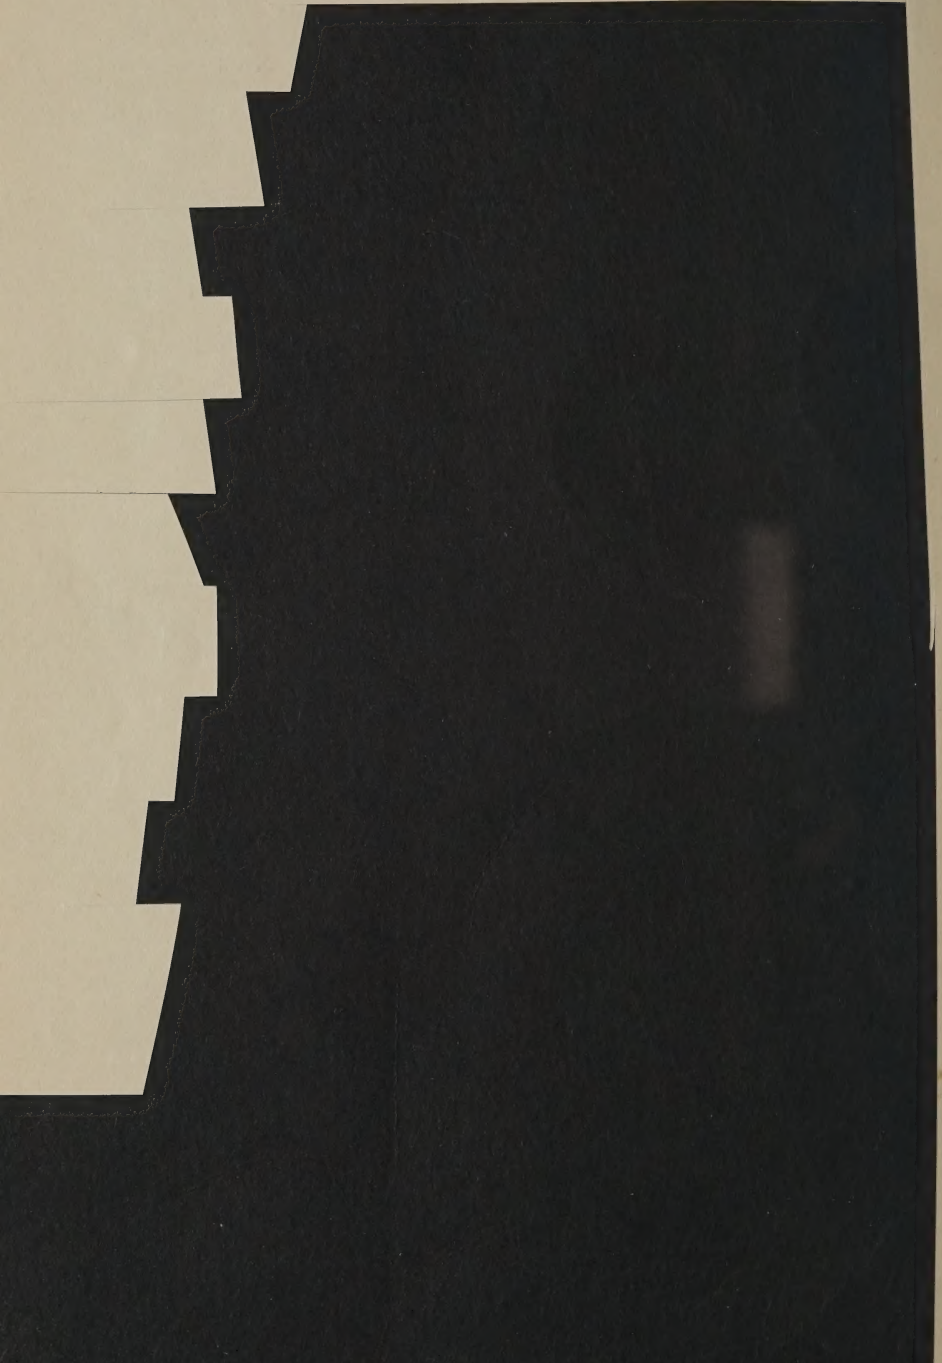

There are two courses of studies open to students—the Collegiate and Commercial.

The Collegiate course covers those branches usually taught in Literary Colleges of the first rank :
